WORKSHOPWORKSHOPWORKSHOP

This summer Livable® Platform organizes a 5-day workshop on concept, design and visualization.

Together with designer Sep Verboom and photographer Aaron Lapeirre, we will work on the perception of “Isolation”. Can we take advantage of insulation? Can we create a dialogue between the environment and ourselves?

We reflect on contemporary social change and develop a concept using a hands-on approach. After a short introduction, we explore different methods with rattan materials to get from concept to creation.

Parallel to creation is the aspect of visualization. How do we visualize this process? How do we visualize these interactions with the world around us?

These experiences are intended to support your creative process both in conceptual thinking and in terms of portfolio. You will be assisted throughout the process, you will think about the concept and how to visually present this concept in a coherent way.

The workshop is open to both students and recent graduates.

AARON & SEP AARON & SEP AARON & SEP

Aaron Lapeirre

Master in Photography at KASK Ghent, Bachelor in Product Design at Howest

Sep Verboom

Livable designer, Specialized in sustainable development

Both speak from a wide portfolio of projects, reports and exhibitions across the continental borders.

Sep and Aaron have been working together for years to find the balance between concept and visualization. The result is effective communication material that was created on location, in the studio or even in the Peruvian Amazon.

Through this close collaboration we have learned that every solid concept also needs a targeted and adapted visualization.

LIVABLE 'PLATFORM' LIVABLE 'PLATFORM'

Livable® Platform, a crossroad for research and Design Culture.

It empowers a practice-based attitude for social change and development.

By curating a cross discipline approach the Platform contributes an international network for social initiatives by artists, researchers and activists.

A process-guided environment allows the Platform to work with both individuals and communities to stimulate relationships between people, the environment and society.
